According to the logical argument from evil, it is not even logically possible for an omniperfect God to coexist with evil. We also learn sympathy for others who suffer, and by working to improve their lot we establish mercy and justice, in ourselves and in society.

Inpart, this is because to have free will is to have a nature that is incomplete. In these, new episodes are illustrated, such as the "calling" of Jonah Jonah his embarkation at Joppa Jonah and his preaching before the king of Nineveh Jonah ff. But the opposition of "rich" Luke points especially to the common and obvious meaning, which, however, ought not to be confined to economical need and distress, but may comprehend the whole of the painful condition of the poor : their low estate, their social dependence, their defenceless exposure to injustice from the rich and the mighty. A second issue concerning heaven that sometimes arises is whether everlasting bliss is even a possible state of affairs.

The people of Nineveh believe God, proclaim a fast, and put on sackcloth. Bible 4 Blessed are they who mourn: for they shall be comforted.
