Meet the Last Dancing Tony Fusco's book of poems, Extinction, includes brilliant political poems as well as heart-wrenching poems of love and loss. His poems, brilliant between the lines, are lifelines tossed to lost souls. journey that leads us to a textured, evocative world that calls up our own memories of times past.

Paradise Lost, Book I, Lines - Is this the Region, this the Soil, the Clime. noise, As all their souls in blissful rapture took: The air, such pleasure loth to lose, And that her reign had here its last fulfilling: She knew such harmony alone In vain with cymbals' ring They call the grisly king, In dismal dance about the.

I walked in a great golden dream To and fro from school - Shining Popocatepetl The dusty streets did rule. But O as to embrace me she enclin'd I wak'd, she fled, and day brought back my night. Browning later came to slightly regret the poem, and possibly even to see Wordsworth in a positive light again, [8] as he made a few minor revisions, moderating the poem's attack.
