means that we have survived because the traits have made us adapt at surviving in The Worlds In My Head environment and reproducing. Once we acknowledge the distinction between the external world, and our internal experiential effigy of it, then we can begin to make quantitative observations of the nature of that internal representation, that it is spatially extended in three dimensions and time, that it expresses an infinite space within a finite representation by using a warped reference scale, and that it is analogical in nature, composed of solid volumes, bounded by colored surfaces, embedded in a spatial void.
